

Mark Slaughter is an Evangelist and the Director of Evangelistic Partnerships for InterVarsity Christian Fellowship/USA. His twin passions are to communicate the Gospel and to mentor younger leaders.

Representing InterVarsity in partnership with other ministries, Mark is spearheading various whole-life mentoring initiatives for a new generation of evangelistic leaders through multiple ministries including Leighton Ford Ministries and the global Lausanne Movement. On behalf of Leighton Ford Ministries, Mark is the director of their Thriving in Ministry grant from the Lilly Endowment, caring for the souls of pastors across the country.

Mark has served for over 30 years with InterVarsity proclaiming God's Kingdom in a thoughtful, winsome, compassionate, and Christ-centered manner. Responding to spiritual inquiries, his unique "Question Mark" open forums on college campuses combine the warmth of Christ's love, the strength of Biblical teaching, and the openness of authentic communication about issues facing today's culture.

Mark is a graduate of Taylor University (B.A. in Religion and Bible) and Trinity Evangelical Divinity School (M. Div. in Evangelism). Before joining InterVarsity, Mark served as an Evangelical Free Church pastor in the greater Indianapolis area.

Mark and his wife, Dawn, live near Indianapolis. They have two adult children and four grandchildren. Mark enjoys playing golf, running, biking, spending time with family, and long walks.
